Adams Express Company, Baltimore, Baltimore County, Maryland Correspondence July, 1863 Correspondence involving the Adams Express company in July, 1863.

Adams Express Office, Baltimore Md., July 2, 1863 (Received 3:45 p.m.)
 Hon. E.M. Stanton, Secretary of War:

By order of General Haupt, we have organized a horse express from this point to General Meade's headquarters. The first express will leave in half an hour, the next at 6 p.m. today. We have reason to believe that we have an organized corps of expressmen extending from Westminster to General Meade's headquarters. That portion of the line from here to Westminster is now being put on. The line is placed in charge of our most active men. Dispatches to General Schenck's headquarters in this city will be forwarded with the utmost dispatch.

Respectfully,
S.M. Shoemaker,
Superintendent Adams Express Company¹

Adams Express Company, Baltimore, Baltimore County, Maryland Hospital Corps The Adams Express Company Hospital Corps was established following the Battle of Gettysburg, Adams County, Pennsylvania.

Baltimore, Md., July 4, 1863.

Hon. E.M. Stanton,
Secretary of War:

The God of Battles having so far given us the victory, our next care is for the wounded. This company propose to get up a hospital corps of their own—they sending men, food, suitable comforts, &c., to the front, with a number of spring wagons, to bring in the wounded. We desire from you such authority as will enable us to go within the lines of our army without hindrance; also transportation for our men and materials by Summit Railway as far as Westminster.

Respectfully,
S.M. Shoemaker,
Superintendent Adams Express Company.¹

War Department,
Washington City, July 4, 1863—5.25 p.m.

S.M. Shoemaker, Baltimore:

Your proposed hospital corps is heartily approved, and every facility will be afforded by this Department for its execution.

General Haupt is instructed to furnish such transportation by rail as he can without interfering with the transportation of army supplies. General Meigs strongly recommends that you send your wagons by the common road, as it can be done as speedily as by rail. There are, he says, 1,100 ambulances, with from two to four horses each, with the Army of the Potomac. I give you herewith a pass through the lines for your agents and employees. If anything more be required, let me know.

Edwin M. Stanton,
Secretary of War

War Department,
Washington City, July 4, 1863—5.45 p.m.

Brigadier-General Haupt, Hanover:

Adams Express, by Mr. Shoemaker, superintendent, proposes to organize and send forward a hospital corps, to assist in caring for and removing the wounded, with stores, supplies, men, and vehicles—spring wagons. They ask transportation to Westminster, by Summit Railway, for men and material.

The Secretary of War has consented, and referred them to you for such transportation as can be furnished by rail without interfering with forwarding of the supplies which the army needs to enable it to pursue the enemy; advising them at the same time that probably the best and speediest route will be, with their spring wagons, over the turnpike roads from Baltimore to Westminster. Also that latest reports show 1,100 ambulances with the Army of the Potomac.

Let nothing interfere with the supply of rations to the men and grain for the horses.

By order of the Secretary of War:

M.C. Meigs,
Quartermaster-General¹

Clifton Aikens died of an unknown cause on the morning of Friday, March 30, 1863 in his home in Cumberland Township, Adams County, Pennsylvania.

"Sudden Death-- We are informed that Mr. Clifton Aikens, of Cumberland township, died very suddenly on Friday last. It seems that he arose in the morning at his usual time, but immediately complained of feeling unwell, and told his wife he would lie down again whilst she got breakfast. Soon after she heard him groan, and upon going to his bedside discovered that he was dying. She ran to a neighbor's for help, but before she returned the vital spark had fled-- he was dead. Verily, 'in the midst of life we are in death.'" ¹

American Anti-Slavery Society The American Anti-Slavery Society, with its state and local auxiliaries promoted the immediate abolition of slavery in the United States.

It was founded by William Lloyd Garrison in 1833. By 1840 its auxiliary societies numbered 2000. They claimed to have a total membership of approximately 150,000 to 200,000. The societies sponsored meetings, adopted resolutions, signed antislavery petitions to be sent to Congress, published journals and enlisted subscriptions. They also printed and distributed propaganda in vast quantities, and sent out agents and lecturers to carry the anti-slavery message to mostly northern audiences.

In 1839 the national organization split over basic differences of approach. Garrison and his more radical followers denounced the United States Constitution as being supportive of slavery. They also insisted on sharing organizational responsibility with women. The less radical wing formed the American and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society which advocated political action and led directly to the birth of the Liberty Party in 1840.

Because of this division of national leadership, the majority of anti-slavery activities in the 1840s and 1850s was carried on by state and local societies. The American Anti-Slavery Society was formally dissolved in 1870 after the American Civil War and Emancipation.

Arnold, George Correspondence Sent The following letter was written from Gettysburg, Adams County, Pennsylvania resident George Arnold to Mr. William T. King on August 15, 1863.

Gettysburg Augst 15th 1863

Mr. W. T. King

Dr. Sir

Yours of the 13th Ins^t is rec^d and am pleased to hear from you, and learn that you are all, well and doing well we are moving along here much as usual, our business continues to be very good. Sales brisk & plenty of work in the Shop. Our town is still lively. many Strangers continue to go & come, Mrs. Arnold & myself have been pretty near worn out. Our house has been full all the time. We are now getting thinned out a little, almost every body has suffered more or less from the invasion, my losses on the farm are said to be about $1000 dollars. I have not yet been out to see it, nor do I want to see it, I do not murmur but think that we all have cause to be thankful that it is no worse, I can forget all except the loss of my Flag. The glorious old Stars and Stripes—but I will have another, I sent your letter to your wife with a note that she could have the desired articles, I believe they are all well, I am sorry that C^o B was not sent here for provo duty instead of the one that is here, it Seams queer, I hope you may escape the draft-- & be permitted to return home, if you have not been over our Battlefield it is worth seeing, I consider it worth a trip across the atlantic—you no doubt have noticed from the papers that the ground has been purchased, & our noble brave dead are all to be collected and interred upon one sacred spot set aside for that purpose, and each state in all probability will erect a suitable monument for its own honored dead. Our Town has now become immortalized & we wish to make the enterprise as attractive as possible by enclosing and beautifying those grounds moistened with the blood of our heroic brave—and I have no doubt that our Town will be much benefited by it for years to come—I long to see this Hellborn rebellion crushed, then I can lay down and depart in peace—I am a poor hand at writing long letters, and as I have Nothing to say that would be very interesting, I will draw to a close with my best wishes not only for your welfare and prosperity here, but for your happiness hereafter,

Yours very Respty
Geo Arnold

My respects to the Boys generally¹

Artillery Ammunition The material used in discharging mounted projectile-firing weapons, mobile or stationary, light or heavy, as distinguished from small arms.

The four prominent types of Civil War era Field Artillery Ammunition were:

Solid Shot was a cast iron solid projectile. The familiar spherical "cannonball" was mostly used in smoothbore pieces. Rifled pieces would use an elongated projectile which was also known as a "bolt." Both types of projectiles were useful for counter-battery fire or for attacking fortifications. The superior power of the rifle bolt was the technological development that made masonry fortifications obsolete.

Shell was a hollow, iron, projectile filled with a bursting charge of black powder. All round shells, and some rifled shells used a fuse to ignite the bursting charge. Rifle shells could also use percussion fuses.

Case Shot was also called "shrapnel" or "shrapnel shell" after its inventor, British artilleryman Henry Shrapnel. Case shot was an improvement on the simple shell by the addition of small lead or iron balls to the interior of a thinner walled projectile. The balls were imbedded in an enclosed form of sulfur or coal tar. Because Case Shot was designed to explode in the air, it almost always used timed fuses.

Canister was a tin can full of iron or lead balls packed in sawdust. When fired, the effect was that of a giant shotgun blast. Canister was essentially short range, anti-personnel ammunition.

Other types of Civil War era Field Artillery Ammunition:

Grapeshot was similar in concept to canister, but it had few and larger balls held together with iron rings or tied up with fabric and twine. Grapeshot was predominantly naval ammunition, but it occasionally was issued to field artillery.
